American Airtight

Over 1000
OF THE
American Air-Tight
Cooking Stoves

WERE RETAILED in Boston by Gardiner Chilson in the short space of six months, and a large number have been sold by myself in this city. This Stove is not equalled by any other stove in the United States, and the unparalleled sales it has met with fully bespeak its unparalleled merits.

HOUSE KEEPERS should be sure and examine this superior Stove, which has won the admiration of several thousand house keepers the past season. It has more real and useful improvements than all others combined. The fire-brick Oven-top has proved to be of great value in absorbing the heat and causing the bread to rise and bake light, equal to the house brick oven.) The brick is found to be more durable than the iron top. It also equalizes the heat around the oven, and a much more even bake is produced in this stove than any other stove known. It has a most perfect arrangement for roasting in front. The Summer arrangement for broiling, boiling, toasting, &c., is complete. The grate clears itself, discharging the ashes into the ash-pit. The flues are large, and so arranged as not to fill up with ashes. It is surprising to see how small an amount of fuel it requires to perform so great a variety of cooking. Its inviting appearance, substantial construction, and general good qualities, have set it forth to be

PATENTS,
AMERICAN AND FOREIGN OFFICE,
And Agency of the U. S. Patent Office, Washington.
22 State Street—Boston.

THE subscriber, by appointment from the Commissioner of Patents, is Agent of the U. S. Patent Office for the purpose of receiving and forwarding to the same all such models, specimens of ingredients, and manufactures, as shall be intended to be patented, or deposited therein, which will be received and forwarded, free of expense and risk, to their owners, and with all possible despatch. The subscriber will prepare Caveats, Specifications, Assignments, and all the necessary Papers and Drawings, will make researches into American and Foreign works, for establishing the validity or utility of inventions, and render advice on all legal and scientific matters respecting the same; Patents secured in Europe and other countries.

By application at this office, inventors are saved the time and expense of a journey to Washington and delay there, as well as all personal trouble in obtaining their patents. The experience of fifteen year's practice—an extensive collection of rare works, documents, decisions, &c. on mechanical subjects and the Patent Laws—and patents of different countries, collected at much expense during the long time this office has been established, and to which daily additions are being made, together with accounts here kept of inventions patented at Washington, enable me to afford important assistance and information to inventors desirous of securing Patents, which in other respects might be difficult of attainment.

In a plea of the case for that the said defendants at China, to wit: Houlton on the twenty-sixth day of July, A. Whig and Courier.
John S. Sayward,—Editor.
FRIDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1847.

☞ The Boston Recorder makes mention of the fact that Dr Pomroy of this city has made a demonstration against the Lyceum lectures of "Messrs Parker & Co," in this city and cautions the managers of all Lyceums that while they "rule out the sectarianism of religion from Lyceums they must also keep out the sectarianism of infidelity." This is very well and no one can or does object to it—The fact however with regard to the Bangor Lyceum is that nothing is "ruled out." There is no rule and every lecturer is left to his own sense of propriety, as to the subject and the manner of his lecture.

The Recorder expresses the opinion that quite enough mischief has been done by Lyceums by the impieties and immoralities of transcendental lecturers going down among the masses, in which they assume the grossest forms of infidelity and depravity of man etc.

It further intreats those to whom is committed the duty of providing lecturers to consider well what persons they employ, and to remember that there are great interests of truth and weighty issues present, and whatever the ... man duty, which may easily be obtained.

The Recorder says it has no objection to Theodore Parker and R W Emerson being employed to deliver literary lectures but they should not be allowed to ... their ... to ... upon.

An application of these principles stated by the Recorder to the Bangor Lyceum and to Bangor people is worthy of some thought. Those who compose the Lyceum have never yet thought it best to limit the lecturers in their subjects.

The general idea seems therefore, to be that "it is best to have it a place for free discussion, for if rules of limitation are agreed upon relative to one subject—that of theology for instance—others would insist upon a rule limiting political subjects and thus by hedging up the way much really valuable matter will be excluded and one great benefit resulting from the Lyceum the acquisition of new views of truth will be lost.

While the Lyceum have not agreed to any rule of limitation, but have left the matter to the judgment and good taste of the lecturers the managers feel that they have no right to make limitations and that the lecturers and not themselves are responsible for any and all violations on the part of any and every lecturer of sound judgment and good taste and the principles of a just comity.

The remedy for any such violations each member of the Lyceum has more or less at command—If he feels that there has been a violation of good taste or good manners on the part of any lecturer—the press—which as a good man in the community he should help support by purse and pen word and deed—should be appealed to as a medium of making his grievance known. Now so far as we are concerned not a line has been handed to us by any person nor from any person touching the matter of such violation or complaint until after the demonstration. Our neglect even if we were neglectful can hardly be plead as a satisfactory excuse for the neglect of those in this matter who felt that the very foundations of the moral health and religious well being of the community depended in any degree upon the utterance of a rebuke through the press. God and not Balak commands curses to be spoken they should at least have been offered in utterance upon one, if not upon all four of the mountains of Moab in this city.

As to the people of Bangor it may, we think without boasting be said that they are as intelligent and as quick of apprehension and possessed of as much gumption as any equal number of men anywhere. There is a remarkable spirit of religious tolerance among them. There is no clanish and effective aristocracy which exercises the least control or for which any man cares a fig. There is a general feeling of equality among our citizens which no difference of occupation or wealth or belief, or party have as yet broken down. There is a general and wide spread acknowledgement of the large liberty. Our citizens delight in it and it has long been deemed the glory of Bangor.

It follows then as a matter of course that they are all ... ears as to being humbugged or corrupted by any ... of error charm he never so wisely. The shoemaker at his bench and the cooper at his barrel are as freely canvass the sentiments of the intellectual giants of the age as the ... of the ... man, and ... what to ... and what to reject. There is little respect for the authority of mere names or for mere authority.

It is altogether ... that such a people will ... agree to any stringent rule regarding Lyceum lectures ... rule at all.

All ... appears, ... such a people should ... a prudent and far seeing discrimination ... may not offend their sense of propriety and of right.

These are our views which a somewhat intimate acquaintance has founded upon us and which our present position and the suggestions of the Recorder have seemed to us to demand should be stated.

☞ The next great subject of interest to which the attention of our people is directed is the great Fair for the benefit of the Female Orphan Asylum which is to commence on Tuesday next and at which will be offered for sale that pleasant book, the Works of the Kerdeskeag which has been expressly prepared for this purpose. The Asylum has strong claims upon the public and to each who are able to contribute to its support. We trust its claims will not be disregarded and that a general and deep interest will be felt in promoting the Fair and through that of aiding the great object it is designed to promote.

☞ The largest merchant ship ever built in America, has recently been constructed in this State, at Kittery at a cost of $100,000 for Messrs D & A Kingsland of New York. She is called 'Columbus' and measures 1800 tons. Maine thus bears the palm.

☞ The Bangor Gazette attracted much attention yesterday on account of the keen severity of the remarks of its editor touching the subject of the "Mountains of Moab."

☞ Bishop Burgess has been engaged to lecture before the Lyceum on the first Tuesday evening in January next.

☞ Meeting of the Mechanic Association this evening.

☞ A striking example of an improvident Irish marriage was lately exhibited at Money gall, in King's county. A happy couple who were married in the morning were caught stealing hay in the evening, to make their nuptial couch.

The Lyceum Lectures and their opposers.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier—

The Rev Dr Pomroy having thought fit, to attack various individuals, and clamor from his pulpit, where no defense can be made—it seems but fair that those who think justice was not done in the premises, should have an opportunity to make some reply through the public press. Will you therefore give insertion in your paper to the following plea for a more righteous verdict.

Waiving all comment on the rights and duties of the manager of the Lyceum, would remark that ... heard no one, and the subject has been pretty freely discussed in all companies, who ... to justify Mr Theodore Parker, for his introducing before the Lyceum in his lecture on the progress of society, the fam... allegory which is certainly calculated to give offence to such a large portion of his audience. On the other hand it is ... that the story would have ... this, been forgotten, or only ... had ... not be ... kept before the people, and they induced to take trip ... of its ... by the ... which has been made about it—... Doubtless there must be a wide difference of opinion between Dr Pomroy and his friends on the one hand—and many who heard Mr Parker's lecture on the ... as to the ... drift and ... of ... We are promised to have ... out to us next Sabbath evening the ... of Fourier ... and ... of the doctrines of the associative school which will be very welcome to many in this city—Dr D. Pomroy ... to pursue a course similar to that of the New York Observer, and many other Newspapers in this country which have long persisted, though often corrected, in misrepresenting—misquoting and garbling extracts from the writings of Fourier and his disciples, I can only say that such a course while it may confirm the bigotry of some persons, will never prevent the thinking part of the community from examining into the subject, as they have opportunity—and forming an independent opinion—on the other hand such a treatment of any of these subjects will be sure to make the candid blush and the judicious grieve.

The eloquent advocate of association who lately presented this subject before the Lyceum, evinced so true a christian spirit—such positive, large, and noble faith that I have no fear, that those who heard him there, whatever they may think of his opinions on Society, will ever stigmatize him as an infidel. Those who did not have the privilege of hearing him, and who may desire to become acquainted with the doctrines of himself, and his brethren of the Associative school, through the representations of their enemies, will very probably so think, and so speak. But before they form such an opinion it would be well for them to remember, that while warmly defending the Bible as a whole—and dearly prizing the doctrine of plenary inspiration, it is quite possible to overlook some very important parts of the Book of Life—There seem to be some precepts of our Lord that have been almost universally repudiated by all christian sects. One of these neglected commands it would be well for us all to call to mind at this time. It is as follows—'Judge not, lest ye be judged—For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged, and with what measure ye mete shall be measured to you again.'

A LOVER OF JUSTICE

Report of the Secretary of War.

The sketches I have presented of the operations of the two main columns of our army do not dimfiece an account of all the achievements in the enemy's country which have reflected lustre on our arms. As early as August, 1846 General Kearney, informed the department, in a letter from Santa Fe, that he should have a disposable force at that place, beyond what would be required to hold it and to accompany him to California, and he proposed to send a detachment to Chihuahua to join General Wool, who was advancing upon that place —On the 23d of September, he ordered Colonel Doniphan with the first regiment of Missouri volunteers, on that service. Navajo Indians—a restless and predatory tribe inhabiting the region of New Mexico, west of the range of mountains bordering the valley of the Rio Grande. Col Doniphan proceeded on this expedition, attended with a large company of American merchants. On the 25th of December, the advance of the command was met by the enemy in considerable force near Bruzito, when an engagement took place, which resulted in the total defeat of the Mexicans, with a loss on their part of nearly two hundred in killed and wounded, and on ours of only seven wounded. The force engaged in this affair on our side was less than five hundred, and on that of the enemy one thousand two hundred and twenty, of which over five hundred were cavalry. Pursuing its march, the command entered El Paso without further opposition. Here it was ascertained that the column under General Wool had been diverted from its original destination.

It therefore became necessary for the detachment to remain at El Paso until covered by artillery, which had been previously ordered to Santa Fe. This accession of force did not join the command until early in February, and then it moved forward towards Chihuahua. On its arrival at the Pass of the Sacramento, about fifteen miles from the Capital of the State, on the 28th of February, the enemy was there discovered in great force, strongly posted on the commanding heights fortified by entrenchments, and well supplied with artillery.

Arrangements were promptly made for an attack, and a fire at once opened from our batteries. The action soon became general, and lasted from 3 o'clock in the afternoon till near dark. All the enemy's redoubts were carried and he was driven with great slaughter from the field, and completely dispersed. His artillery consisting of ten pieces and some culverins was captured, and his loss in killed and wounded was about six hundred, and ours did not exceed nine men. The numerical strength of the enemy in this engagement was over four thousand—twelve hundred cavalry, twelve hundred infantry, three hundred artillery, and over fourteen hundred rancheros—under the command of several officers of high rank and distinction. Our entire force in the action was less than nine hundred. On the succeeding day our victorious troops entered the capital of Chihuahua, and after remaining there some weeks, proceeding to join the army under Major General Taylor at Monterey.

The long and arduous march by Col Doniphan and his small and gallant command, of more than five thousand miles through a hostile country, in the course of which two battles were fought against vastly superior numbers, and decisive victories won, with great loss on the part of the enemy, and almost bloodless on ours, is an achievement to which it would be difficult to find a parallel in the history of military operations.

After taking possession of Santa Fe in the summer of 1846, and making the necessary arrangements for holding it and the territory of New Mexico, General Kearney, pursuant to instructions from this department proceeded to California. He commenced this expedition in September proceeding by an unusual and almost unknown route. Going down the Rio Grande more than two hundred miles he passed over to the river Gila, and followed its course to its junction with the Colorado of the West, a distance of five hundred miles. His march continued forty miles down the Colorado, thence sixty miles across the great desert. On the 2d of December he arrived at a settlement on the frontier of California. While pursuing his march from that place, he was met two days thereafter, about forty miles from San Diego, by a small detachment of volunteers under Capt Gillespie sent out by Commodore Stockton to give information of the enemy who to the number of six or seven hundred, were reported to be in arms in the territory.

Being informed that an armed party of Californians was at San Pasqual, eight or ten miles distant from him, he moved forward on the 6th with a view to attack them. An action ensued, and resulted in their defeat, with considerable loss in killed and wounded. The force under Gen Kearney engaged on this occasion did not exceed eighty, the enemy were double that number and being all well mounted, were able to make good their retreat.

The next day the detachment proceeded on its march and again encountered a hostile party occupying a hill near San Bernado, and drove them from their position. Gen Kearney remained with his command at this place until the 11th, when he was joined by a party of sailors and marines, sent out by Com. Stockton, and then proceeded to San Diego. Here terminated a most arduous march of 1141 miles through a country never before traversed by an armed force, and beset with formidable difficulties, only to be surmounted by extraordinary energy and perseverance, and towards its close obstructed by an enemy who opposed a desperate resistance, which was overcome by severe and sanguinary conflicts. Our successes, so creditable to the heroic band who achieved them, were not obtained without the loss of three brave and accomplished officers and about eighteen gallant men.

On the 29th of December a force of 500 men consisting of dismounted dragoons, volunteers, marines and sailors, moved from San Diego upon Ciudad de los Angeles, the stronghold of the enemy, with a view to succor a party of Americans moving on the same point from Monterey. On the 8th of January this force reached the San Gabriel river, where it found the enemy full 600 strong, with artillery stationed on the heights which commanded the passage of the river, and determined to dispute it. A severe conflict ensued, which lasted an hour and a half, when the heights were carried, and the enemy defeated and driven from the field. The next day he was again met and routed in the plains of Mesa. Without further resistance the detachment moved forward and arrived in the 10th at Ciudad de los Angeles, and took peaceable possession of the place.

The results of these engagements were so disastrous to the enemy, that some of the leaders of the Californians, a few days thereafter, met Lt Col Fremont who was in command of 400 volunteers, near San Fernando, and entered into a capitulation with him whereby the people under arms and in the field agreed to disperse and remain quiet and peaceable. Thus the serious disturbances which had arisen in California subsequent to the first occupation of the country by our forces were put down, and from that time to the latest period to which our information extends, all was tranquil and no serious apprehensions of further disturbance were entertained.

Col Mason was sent from the U States in November, 1846, to California, where he arrived in February. Gen Kearney had permission to return home when the condition of affairs should no longer require his presence in that country. Pursuant to instructions from this department the command of our land forces in California, and the charge of the temporary civil government there established, were devolved on Col Mason about the 1st of last June, when Gen Kearney left for the U States.

The military operations in California, previous to the arrival of Gen Kearney, had been conducted by the officers of the navy and Lieut Col Fremont, by forces drawn in part from the squadron and in part organized in the country. All the transactions which have been detailed took place before any of the land forces sent from the U States, except the few dragoons who accompanied Gen Kearney, (not exceeding 100) had arrived in California. The company of artillery which embarked at New York in July, 1846, did not reach that country until February, 1847, and the regiment of volunteers from New York, which sailed in September, arrived there in March.

A battalion, under the command of Lieut Col Cooke, from Santa Fe, arrived in California in January, 1847. This battalion also proceeded by way of the Gila river, and by deviating from the route taken by Gen Kearney, found one more practicable, over which, though no wheel carriage of any description had ever before passed, they were enabled to take a train of wagons.

About 200 recruits have been sent out within a few months past to fill up the companies in the regiment of volunteers in California.

By the last report, dated 18th June, from Colonel Mason now chief in the command of the military force in California, and exercising the functions of temporary civil governor there, it appears that the troops in that country do not exceed seven hundred and fifty, exclusive of the battalion from Santa Fe, whose term of service expired in July, and who were not expected to re engage. When the recruits shall have arrived the entire force in that country will be about one thousand. These occupy seven posts, at a long distance from each other. A detachment has been sent to garrison La Paz, the capital of Lower California.

In addition to the troops required to garrison places to be retained, it is proposed to have in the field a competent force for aggressive operations—to strike the enemy whenever he may present a vulnerable point, to open avenues from the ports in our possession into the enemy's country, and to cover and subject, to our control some of his rich mining districts and productive agricultural regions. It is not deemed proper to point out in more detail the movements and objects contemplated in the further prosecution of the war upon this plan.

I proceed to present my views in relation to the troops considered necessary for this purpose.—The twenty five regiments of the regular army, as distinguished from the volunteer force, when filled up to the limit fixed by law, would be twenty-eight thousand eight hundred and fourteen exclusive of officers, but the actual strength, as near as can be ascertained, is now twenty one thousand five hundred and thirty-three, it will therefore require seven thousand three hundred and eighty-one enlisted men to complete the regular military establishment.

During the last year, the recruiting service for the regular army has been attended with considerable success. The recruits enlisted for the fifteen old regiments amount to eleven thousand and eighty-one and those for the ten regiments raised under the act of the last session of Congress are eleven thousand one hundred and sixty two.

By the operations of the recruiting service, it is believed that the present strength of these regular regiments will be fully sustained, and probably increased.

The accompanying tables from the adjutant General's office show that there are now in service engaged for the war, twenty-three regiments of volunteers, seven battalions and thirty-three companies not organized into regiments or battalions, but the rank and file of all these do not probably exceed twenty thousand men. Most of the volunteer forces have borne a conspicuous part in the present arduous campaign and particularly in the series of severe conflicts with the enemy—The casualties of the service have heretofore, fallen heavily upon them. They have become considerably reduced. To give those serving for the war their complete organization, will require an addition of about twelve thousand five hundred men.

Attempts have been made, under the act passed at the last session of Congress, to engage volunteers to fill up the companies in service, and officers have been detached from their commands for that purpose. These efforts have not been successful, only eight hundred and twenty-one have been procured. One of the disadvantages attending these attempts has been the want of authority to place them on the same footing in respect to compensation as recruits of the regular army. As the volunteers engage for the same term as the recruits for the ten regiments, there can be no reason for not holding out to them the same inducements to enter the public service. It is, therefore, respectfully recommended that Congress be asked to authorize a like bounty to volunteer recruits.

I also recommend that those raised in the same State be consolidated temporarily, and the supernumerary officers sent home to obtain recruits for their respective companies. Should this attempt prove unsuccessful then I recommend that the consolidation be made permanent and that entire companies of volunteers be accepted, to take the place of the vacancies in regiments and battalions which may be occasioned by the consolidation.

The forces now in service, augmented by recruits to the extent which it is reasonable to expect, will not, in my opinion, be sufficient for our contemplated military operations. I therefore submit for your consideration and approval the proposition to raise ten additional regiments of regular forces for the war. It is important that authority should be given for this purpose at an early period in the approaching session of Congress. A delay even of a few months would be very injurious as it would give time to the enemy to reorganize his shattered forces and recruit his exhausted strength. If such authority be at once given, the new regiments might be raised and sent to the seat of war in season to pass the unhealthy district along the coast of the Gulf before the return of the endemic, and to participate in the next campaign. It is desirable that Congress should be impressed with the importance of providing at once for this increase of our troops.

The increase of the regular force to the proposed extent is much preferred to a further call for volunteers—not, however, because the former are preferable to the latter for courage, endurance or gallant deeds of daring, for in these high attributes, the regular troops and the volunteers have been alike eminently distinguished, and have, on every trying occasion, nobly contended for excellence, but judging from past experience, it is believed that in this way the army can be more expeditiously reinforced, and the regiments more effectively recruited and kept up, and in some respects better adapted to the services likely to be required of them.

The exigencies of the army require a larger force than can be brought into the field, including the proposed new regiments. It is therefore urged that authority should be given to accept the services of more volunteers. It should not be restricted to a number less than twenty thousand. With the increase of our present force by the ten new regiments, it is not probable that there will be occasion to exercise this authority; yet an emergency may arise when a resort to it would be of great importance to the public interest.

The department has presented estimates for considerable deficiencies in some of the war appropriations for the current fiscal year. Provision was made in these appropriations for continuing in service, besides the regular troops ten thousand volunteers, but it was subsequently deemed important greatly to augment this volunteer force.—The excess of volunteers called out beyond that number is over fifteen thousand, for which no appropriation was made. The expense of organizing and transporting them to the seat of war, together with their pay, subsistence, and allowance for clothing, have produced a considerable part of these deficiencies. The unforeseen and extraordinary rise in the price of articles of subsistence, has also caused a much larger expenditure in the Commissary's Department than was expected when the estimates for subsistence were presented to the last Congress. The largest amount of disbursements has been in the Quartermaster's Department. For a statement of this amount, as well as the necessity for it, I respectfully refer to the report of the Quartermaster General. The duties of that branch of the public service are numerous and difficult at all times, in war—and particularly in a foreign war, carried on at a great distance from our ordinary sources of supplies—these duties are vastly multiplied and complicated. The difficulties under which that department has labored from the commencement of the war, suddenly called on, as it then was, in an unprepared state, to provide for several armies destined for different and distant fields of action, and subsequently in fitting out the important expedition against Vera Cruz, and procuring transportation by sea and land in our wide spread operations, and the manner in which these difficulties have been met and overcome, often under the most untoward circumstances, are well presented in the accompanying report of the Quartermaster General.

As a measure for reducing expenses in one important branch of duties of the Quartermaster's Department, and at the same time giving it greater efficiency, I invite special attention to his recommendation in regard to the mode of employing teamsters, mechanics, and other laborers. These amount to several thousands, and the difficulty in procuring them in sufficient numbers, and retaining them in service at places where they are wanted, has forced upon that department the necessity of paying extravagant wages, and in other respects incurring large expenses, which might, to a considerable extent, be avoided in the manner suggested.

If authority were given to enlist the men required in the Quartermaster's Department, with all the advantages to which troops of the line are entitled, and subject to similar obligations, the public expenses on this account would be much diminished, and the Quartermaster's Department relieved, to a considerable extent, from a serious embarrassment.

In the estimates for the next fiscal year, deductions have not been made for the contributions which may be collected at the Mexican ports, or levied in the interior of the country, nor for the supplies which may be there obtained. From these sources it is reasonable to expect such assistance as will lighten the burdens of the war; but there are no means of estimating the amount which the enemy can be forced to contribute towards defraying our expenses, or in the way of furnishing our troops with supplies. The orders and instructions issued to the officers of the army to levy contributions at the Mexican ports garrisoned by our troops, are hereto annexed. The total amount received by the officers of the army, as exhibited by the returns, is $330,810 46. Of this sum, $430,722 33 have been paid over to the disbursing officers of the army and navy, (see table annexed to the orders respecting military contributions.) Though our forces have occupied the principal Mexican ports on the Gulf, the trade with them has been inconsiderable, because the introduction of merchandise into the country has been almost entirely obstructed. The guerilla bands have had possession of the avenues leading into the interior, and all articles wherever found, which have passed through ports in our occupation have been regarded (and, I believe, by the express order of the Mexican government) as plunder. A very different state of things in this respect will, it is believed, hereafter exist, as the difficulties of bringing imports within the reach of consumers will be removed. In that event, the collections at these ports will be vastly augmented.

The business of collecting the contributions has been necessarily devolved on military officers.—This duty has been performed at unhealthy places, where a destroying epidemic prevails during many months of the year. It seems to be but just that those thus employed and those exposed should receive additional compensation, but under the restriction of existing laws, here is no authority to sanction their claim to an extra allowance. I respectfully recommend that Congress should be asked to allow to officers engaged at the Mexican ports in collecting contributions a per centage on the sums received, and that authority should be given to regulate the number and determine the pay of the several persons employed in this business. There is no official information in this department showing the amount of revenue or contributions which has been levied at the ports in our occupancy on the Pacific, but it is understood that collections have there been made and the amount applied towards the support of the civil government established in California.

The despatch of Col Mason, to which I have before alluded, refers to the unsettled claims in that country against the United States and recommends that immediate measures should be taken to ascertain the amount of such as are well founded and that provision be made for immediate payment. These claims are principally for property of various descriptions furnished to or taken by our forces in the course of the military operations in that country. The delay to pay them has already produced much dissatisfaction and is prejudicial to the interests of the United States. Some of the officers engaged in this distant service have become personally responsible for debts contracted for the use and in the service of the United States, it is also due to them that provision should be made for paying these debts.

The resolution of the 3d of March last providing for the payment of expenses incurred by States and individuals in organizing subsisting, and transporting volunteers previous to their being mustered and received into the service of the United States had reference to such troops only as had been mustered before that period. Like claims of a subsequent date have been presented which could not be paid, for want of authority. I recommend that Congress be asked to provide by law for the adjustment of these claims by the accounting officers.

I also recommend that provision be made for the payment of a regiment of volunteers from Texas, which entered the service in February last in compliance with a call by the commanding officer at Camargo, under what he deemed to be a pressing emergency. The regiment, after being mustered, proceeded to the Rio Grande, where it was discharged, pursuant to an order of Major General Taylor. As this call was made without authority from either this department or the commanding general an appropriation will be necessary to pay the volunteers for the time they were in service.

I respectfully repeat the recommendation in my last annual report on the subject of clothing in kind for volunteers in lieu of the money which is at present paid to them as a commutation. The experience of the past year has shown the necessity for this change. The clothing provided by the volunteers themselves both in kind and quality is generally unsuited for the service and often proves to be deficient in quantity. Serving in an enemy's country and at a distance from the ordinary sources of supply, it can seldom be replaced when lost or worn out and always at an exorbitant price. Much of the suffering which has been experienced by these troops may be attributed to the want of proper clothing. If authority were given to supply the volunteers in the manner provided for the regular troops it is believed they would be better clothed and at less cost to themselves and to the government, than by the present mode. It is understood that if such provision is made the arrangements of the Quartermaster's Department are such in relation to providing clothing that it can readily furnish a supply to the volunteers.

I also repeat the recommendations in my last report in regard to a retired list of officers of the army who, by age or infirmities have become unable to perform active duties. The experience of the past year has added force to the considerations in favor of such a measure. For the details of the plan, as well as for reasons in favor of it I invite your attention to the report of the Adjutant General.

British Steamer in the Gulf—Arrival of Discharged Soldiers—Gen. Taylor.

The brig Salva, at New Orleans, which sailed from Havana on the 29th ult. reported the arrival at Bermuda on the 19th Nov of a British steam frigate which left England on the 16th of October.

The British Royal Mail Steamer Tevot arrived at Ship Island (below New Orleans) on Sunday the 5th inst from Southampton, which port she left on the 2d ult.—She is the first of the monthly line of steamers between Southampton and New Orleans. She left on the 6th for Vera Cruz.

The steamship McKim has arrived at New Orleans from Vera Cruz, via Tampico but her advices are no later from the former port. She left Tampico as late as the 25th ult, yet brought no news from Mexico. She had eight cabin passengers and about one hundred discharged teamsters and soldiers. P Bates, a discharged teamster, of Derby, Vermont, died on board 5th inst. The Virginia and Maria Butts left Tampico for Vera Cruz on the 28th, and the schooner Velasco would sail for New Orleans on the 29th. Schooner Tabot going in as the McKim came out. When 25 miles northeast of Tampico, the latter passed the steamer Fashion from New Orleans for Tampico and Vera Cruz.

Gen Taylor was detained at New Orleans until Sunday morning, when he left in the steamer Missouri, en route to his plantation at Baton Rouge. He would pass a few days with his family, and then visit his country seat in Mississippi, so that if needed in Mexico he can return immediately.
